“Justification and Regeneration” by Charles Leiter

Regeneration

A Parable from the University

At every college and university, students study hard to get an “A” at the end of the course. When I was a student, I did the same thing. But I had one class that was different. It was a senior level course taken only by physics and chemistry majors and there were only four or five students in the class. The first day of lectures, our teacher surprised us with the following announcement: “you don’t have to worry about your grade in this course-you all have an “A.” Now we can just settle down and enjoy the material.”

Now, this is exactly what God does in Justification. God gives us an “A” at the beginning of the Christian life! We do not labor to merit eternal life at the end of our course; we have eternal life.

Lost religious men have two basic responses to this doctrine. On the one hand, the legalist hates it. This self-righteous Pharisee only does “good works” because he is trying to get an “A” at the end of his life. If he could, he would like to live in sin, and he resents the fact that he does not get to. His objection is: “If God gives men eternal life at the beginning of the Christian life, what will keep them from continuing in sin? If He gives men an ‘A’ at the beginning of the course, no one will study the material.”

On the other hand, the lawless religious man likes the doctrine of justification by faith. “Well, I’ve already got my “A”! Now I can throw my book in the trash, ignore the teacher, and go do my own thing.” They view “free grace” as a “license to sin.”

What is wrong with the reasoning of both the legalist and the libertine? What does God do? At the very same time that

He gives us an “A” at the beginning of our course, He also changes us on the inside so that we will love to study the material! In other words, when God justifies a man, he also regenerates him.
